BILL ESTABLISHES REGISTRY TO PROTECT PEOPLE WITH DEVELOPMENTAL DISABILITIES

Governor Chris Christie has signed a bill that would create a statewide registry of caregivers for people with developmental disabilities who have harmed someone who they were supposed to protect.

This new law, sponsored by New Jersey Senate President Stephen M. Sweeney, establishes a Central Registry of Offenders against Individuals with Developmental Disabilities to prevent caregivers with a history of abuse from harming other individuals.

“We owe it to our most vulnerable residents to ensure they are given every protection from being unknowingly placed in the care of an abuser, “said Sweeney. “This registry will give New Jersey families of individuals with developmental disabilities peace of mind that they don’t have to worry about whether the person caring for their loved one truly has their best interests at heart.

The registry will include caregivers against whom allegations of abuse, neglect or exploitation have been substantiated. Anyone listed in the registry will be prohibited from employment in a facility or program run by the Division of Developmental Disabilities or a licensed affiliate. Employers serving vulnerable populations will have access to the registry to determine whether potential or current employees have a history of abuse. According to data from the Arc of New Jersey, an individual with a developmental disability has a 90 percent chance of being sexually abused at some point during his or her life – yet only three percent of those cases will be reported.

BILL WOULD INCREASE ASSET LIMITS FOR SSI RECIPIENTS

A bipartisan bill sponsored by Massachusetts Congresswoman Niki Tsongas and Wisconsin Congressman Tom Petri would reform the “asset test” in the Supplemental Security Income (SSI) program, making it easier for people to save money and still benefit from the federal program. SSI is the primary provider of subsistence cash to extremely low – income individuals, seniors and people with disabilities.

The SSI Savers Act of 2010 (H.R. 4937) would remove savings disincentives in SSI in several ways:

- The Bill would raise the “asset limit” for individuals in the program from $ 2,000 to $ 5,000; for couples the limit would increase $ 3,000 to $ 7,500
- The Bill would change the way in which assets are counted. Currently, SSI counts all resources, including retirement accounts, such as 401 (k)s and IRAs. The bill would exclude retirement savings for those under age 65 who are not living in an institution from being counted toward assets. Education Savings Accounts and Individual Development Accounts.
• For those 65 and older who are living in an institution, the bill would exclude savings in Retirement accounts below $10,000 for an individual and $15,000 for a couple or household.
• It would change the way in which income is defined, so that 1/3 of the income from a retirement account for those 65 or older would be excluded as well.

Advocates have called for reforms to Social Security to allow people with disabilities to save a modest amount, and earn a modest income while still on the program. The bill was originally introduced in the US House of Representatives on March 3, 2010 and was referred to the House Subcommittee on Income Security and Family Supports.

FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR’S DESK - CARMELA SLIVINSKI

I am thrilled to share some very exciting news with DAWN members, consumers and colleagues. For many years, the Statewide Independent Living Council (SILC) has identified the areas of Sussex and Warren counties as underserved in the State Plan for Independent Living for New Jersey (SPIL). The SPIL is a document submitted by the SILC to Rehabilitative Services Administration (RSA) at the federal level which details how Independent Living dollars are to be used within the state. The priorities in the document are based on consumer input gathered through various methods, including surveys and public forums. By identifying Sussex and Warren counties as underserved, the SILC laid the foundation for a new Center for Independent Living (CIL) to be created in that area should additional funds be made available to NJ.

Last year, as a result of the “American Recovery and Reinvestment Act”, NJ received enough funds to support a new CIL. These funds were available through a competitive bid and DAWN submitted a proposal for the funds. While DAWN has always served the Sussex and Warren county area with a very limited amount of resources, this was an opportunity to finally begin to offer services to those communities in a more comprehensive manner. The proposal was submitted in June of this year and in late September; we were informed that our proposal was successful.

The New CIL is targeted to be based in Hackettstown, NJ and will support 2 new positions, a full-time Independent Living Specialist and a part-time Information and Referral Specialist. We are currently in the process of interviewing for the positions and identifying accessible office space. We plan to be fully operational early in the New Year.

We are currently working to expand our representation on the Board of Directors from those 2 counties. If you reside in Sussex or Warren county and have an interest in hearing more about serving on our Board of Directors, please contact me via telephone at 973-625-1940 or via email at eslivinski@dawncil.org.

If you would like to hear more about our expansion and future plans, please join us at our annual meeting on Wednesday, November 17th from 6:30 -9:00 pm at Christ Episcopal Church in Budd Lake. A light dinner will be served. Transportation is available.

INTRODUCING NJ PROTECT

NJ Protect is a new health insurance option for uninsured New Jerseyans with pre-existing medical conditions. Coverage through NJ Protect will generally cost less than comparable individual health insurance and offer superior benefits. Because the program is federally subsidized, treatment for pre-existing medical conditions will be covered as of the day a policy goes into effect, and preventive care will be covered at no out-of-pocket cost to the policyholder. The eligibility requirements are established by Federal law. To find out more about NJ Protect go to their website http://www.state.nj.us/dobi/division_insurance/njprotect/index.htm

FEDERAL BILL TO REMOVE “MENTAL RETARDATION” FROM LAWS PASSES THE U.S. SENATE

Before leaving for the summer break, the United States Senate unanimously approved legislation to replace the term “mental retardation” with “intellectual disability” in some areas of federal government.

The Bill, known as “Rosa’s Law” would impact health, education, and labor policy at the federal level. Under the measure, individuals with disabilities would retain the same rights that they currently have, but the terminology would be swapped as laws and documents come up for revision over the next several years. The measure is not expected to incur any cost. The bill must now go before the House of Representatives and gain the support of President Obama to take effect. Governor Christie of New Jersey signed a similar bill covering the State of New Jersey on August 17, 2010.

A CONVOLUTED CADENCE - by Susan Donald

As I make my way through ordinary days with my teenage daughter who has multiple disabilities I make observations of how our circumstances are fitting into the world around us. Often I find that strangers can make or break a day. An unkind word or action can be the defining moment of a bad day. An unexpected kind word or action sometimes turns an ordinary neutral day into a good one. The tone of everyday errands can be set by how strangers act.

We were a small percussion section. The sticking brake on my daughter’s wheelchair clicking away and the thumpy rattle of the shopping cart as we made our way through the store was our convoluted cadence. Occasionally Hillary added her voice to the mix, just to keep it interesting, or maybe to warn the people coming out of the intersecting aisles. One of the challenging parts about shopping alone with her is pushing all 230 pounds of girl and wheelchair with one hand and pulling the shopping cart behind with the other while avoiding running into other shoppers or displays, or knocking things off shelves by cutting corners too close with either piece of equipment. Trying to stop in time when someone stops suddenly in front of me adds challenge and interest. So far, I haven't hit anyone. I think occasionally about putting spikes on the end of the footplates of the chair for those times when people just don't want to give an inch, but up to this point I've controlled myself. At times, I have wished I had an air horn at my disposal for those talking on their cell phones, oblivious to other shoppers trying to navigate the merchandise. This particular day there was no temptation, it was Nice People Day. I love Nice People Day! The cashier helped unload my cart onto the belt without being asked. She was cheerful, efficient, and used a minimum of bags. The day continued its pleasant theme when I exited the store as, amazingly, when I needed to cross the parking lot with my little caravan the traffic stopped to let us get off the curb and cross to our vehicle. That might sound like no big deal, but I assure you that it doesn't often happen and I sure do appreciate when it does!

It is the simple things that strangers do that can sometimes either make or break my day, and this day they made it. It must have been that our convoluted cadence was a happy one.

“TAKE ONE AND PASS ALONG” – THE ARC FINDS SURVEY

The Arc seeks individuals with intellectual and developmental disabilities (I/DD) and their families or caregivers to participate in a national disability needs survey. The Arc FINDS (Family and Individual Needs for Disability Supports) is a free, online survey designed to tap into the knowledge and perspectives of individuals and families within the I/DD community, including self-advocates on different issues across the life span. So far, thousands of people have taken the survey; more participants are being sought as every opinion will count. Results will provide greater understanding about what services are being received, where gaps exist, and what new supports may be needed from the individual and family perspective. To access the online survey, go to: http://www.thearc.org and link to the survey from the home page – and pass the word along to others. Take one and pass along!
